Unlocking the Power of Palm Oil:

A Vital Resource for Everyday Life

Palm oil, derived from the red pulp of the oil palm fruit, is one of the most widely used and versatile vegetable oils globally, found in nearly 50% of supermarket products. In Nigeria, it's a culinary essential rich in nutrients like pro-vitamin A and antioxidants, making it vital for health and nutrition.

While only 5% of Nigeria's crude palm oil comes from organized plantations, companies like Soana Oil Palm are leading the shift toward sustainable, ethical, and scalable palm oil production empowering smallholder farmers and promoting environmental and economic progress across Africa.

MEMBERSHIPS

WHAT WE STAND BY

Who are the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil (RSPO)

Established in 2004, the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil (RSPO) is a globally recognized, multi stakeholder non-profit organization dedicated to advancing the production and use of sustainable palm oil. Born out of the need to address the environmental and social challenges associated with palm oil cultivation, RSPO brings together a diverse network of industry players and interest groups across the entire palm oil value chain. Its membership includes oil palm growers, processors and traders, consumer goods manufacturers, retailers, financial institutions, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) focused on environmental and social sustainability. Together, these stakeholders collaborate under a common vision: to transform markets and make sustainable palm oil the global norm. At the heart of RSPO's mission is a comprehensive set of environmental and social performance criteria, which member companies must adhere to in order to produce Certified Sustainable Palm Oil (CSPO). These standards are designed to minimize the negative impacts of palm oil production on biodiversity, climate change, and local communities, ensuring that the industry contributes positively to sustainable development goals. Through this collaborative framework, RSPO has become a key driver in promoting transparency, accountability, and continuous improvement across the global palm oil industry.

RSPO Certification

As a certified member of the Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil (RSPO), Soana Oil Palm adheres to globally recognized standards for sustainable palm oil production. This membership underscores our dedication to environmental conservation, ethical labor practices, and responsible community engagement.
